There's so much rumbling out of Victoria after the leak of the "Ethnicgate" memos and the revelation that government resources were used to hire partisan campaigners.

The big story tonight is that there will be an emergency cabinet meeting in Vancouver tomorrow, and that what will happen is anyone's guess.

Christy Clark's press secretary is claiming that Clark called the cabinet meeting herself; reporters are describing it somewhat different.

One way or the other, we may be witnessing the end of the Clark government. Tomorrow ought to be fun.
