

Goodbye, Politics, Re-Spun! Hello, WePivot.net!

by Stephen Elliott-Buckley - Friday, October 21, 2016

<http://politicsrespun.org/2016/10/goodbye-politics-re-spun-hello-wepivot-net/>

"Politics, Re-Spun" is now WePivot.net! but why, you scream in horror!

next month is the 14th anniversary of Politics, Re-Spun...it's time for a reframing/rebranding/pivot to something more...betterer, or more bigly, if you will.

14 years ago, in the twisted Orwellian months after 9/11 where words did not mean what words are, it was important to de-spin the political and re-spin it for political, economic, social and environmental justice.

but re-spinning isn't enough, godammit!

we need to pivot

into a new world, a new era

into a new reconciliation with First Nations, Métis and Inuit into a recognition that male supremacy and rape culture need to end yesterday into a dynamic where white supremacy and colonial physical, economic, political and social occupations are acknowledged, addressed, reparations defined and issued, and TRC'd to a new sense of nationhood into a new interdependent, symbiotic relationship with the environment into a new relationship with systems theory and radical things like evidence-based policy onto a train that ET3s/Hyperloops down the track laid by the Leap Manifesto into a speedy embrace of the post-carbon energy infrastructure into a realm where we practice sociology with glee and where we intentionally, proactively and collectively build the society we want because we're running out of time before our future grandchildren condemn all of us for being useless tools and dinosaurs

it's time to being!
isn't it?
THAT is why We Pivot!
and in moments, it will happen at <http://WePivot.net>