Clinton breathed a sigh of relief and spun the result: thanks for the "win."

This was no win. Despite the massive corporate media campaign to ignore Sanders, he did exceptionally well because he resonates with actual people.

Democratic Results in Iowa »

| | Pct. | Delegates |
|------------------------------|-------------|------------------|
| Hillary Clinton 49.9% | 22 | |
| Bernie Sanders 49.6 | 21 | |
| Martin O'Malley 0.6 | - | |

If Clinton were to switch back to the Republican Party right now, I'm sure she'd win the White House easily. But being the corporate candidate in a leftward drifting Democratic Party, she has everything to lose.

With Sanders' lead in NH polling, a win there may cripple the Clinton campaign.

By the way, have you read Michael Moore's endorsement of Sanders yet? There's a great image that explains how Clinton loses, if she does.

And a special note for Canadians...A Sanders presidency is the best hope we have of scuttling the TPP for Canada!

It's not hard to see the true colors of the candidates.
