

Solicitations From My Inbox: A January of Trudeau

by Tia Everitt - Monday, January 14, 2013

<https://politicsrespun.org/2013/01/solicitations-from-my-inbox-a-january-of-trudeau/>

Pity Justin Trudeau.

It seems that nobody is willing to confront him and force him to deal with the fact that the Liberal Party of Canada died two years ago. In the meantime, his handlers and the media humor him while he runs around like the Norman Bates of Canadian politics, dragging the taxidermied corpse of the Grits in a wheel chair, while screaming "Father! Please! They're waiting for me Father!"

From my Inbox:

Solicitations From My Inbox: A January of Trudeau - 01-14-2013

by Tia Everitt - Politics, Re-Spun - <http://politicsrespun.org>

Friend -- You are receiving this email because at one point you believed in the Liberal Party of Canada. Now, I am trying to build a party that you can believe in again. In the coming weeks, I hope you'll get involved in the various leadership discussions surrounding the kind of party we want to build together and the leader you trust to represent you. I want to keep building a proud and prosperous country, but we need to build our Liberal Party first.

You don't have to decide if I'm your candidate today, but you cannot vote if you do not register.

No fees, no membership. Just your vote.

So please keep your options open, register as a Supporter and follow me over the coming weeks at Justin.ca.

Thanks,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Justin Trudeau", with a large, sweeping flourish extending to the left.