But it's not JUST a war on women. It's on everyone who isn't overflowing with entitlements, and it's largely being waged by white men, who seek to perpetuate male and white supremacy.

You are either actively on the side of the oppressed, or the oppressor. And if you're silent, you're with the oppressor.

Let's up our game for justice and dignity:

"Last night, as the news swarmed online, a friend texted me: 'There's a war out there against us.'

"I think she's right. I think there is a war. I think we've been fighting it for some time. I think it's reached a breaking point.

"This war is not about men and women. This war is about those who believe people of all races, cultures, sexes, genders, classes, and religions deserve kindness and respect, and those who don't. We have to speak out, for ourselves and for each other."
