

Useful political lessons from Down Under

by kevin harding - Friday, September 06, 2013

<http://politicsrespun.org/2013/09/useful-political-lessons-from-down-under/>

Say what you want about Kevin Rudd (and he's not exceptionally progressive, from what I hear), but this is:

1. A great way to explain support for equal rights in marriage
2. A great way to answer a public question on the same
3. A very good explanation of how a politician can change their mind on a divisive topic
4. A reminder that changing one's mind on such topics should not be a political liability, but should rather be considered a strength, provided that you can explain why.

YouTube Video