

What I'm Remembering Today

by Stephen Harper - Thursday, November 11, 2010

<https://politicsrespun.org/2010/11/what-im-remembering-today/>

- People who are willing to die to protect others deserve respect.
- Prime Minister Stephen Harper feels being at a G20 meeting in Korea is more important than personally showing respect in Ottawa to the living, suffering and dead members of the Canadian Forces.
- Politicians, not troops, pick missions to join.
- Neglecting and aggravating the needs and health of soldiers, veterans and their families is inexcusable.
- A little humility goes a long way.