

Yet Another Logistical Solution to Homelessness

by Stephen Elliott-Buckley - Friday, January 16, 2015

<http://politicsrespun.org/2015/01/yet-another-logistical-solution-to-homelessness/>

So, Utah has been eradicating homelessness by giving people homes. The bonus is that it's easier and cheaper to provide social services to people when their housing needs are met.

From Amsterdam, we see yet another logistical solution for emergency housing while we have a national dialogue on a national housing plan.

A rich country like Canada should have no difficulty developing a national housing strategy that solves homelessness and unaffordable housing.

The houses will rent for 700 euros a month, or about $900. It's a little less than someone might pay for a cramped single room in the city, and it comes with a full second-story loft bedroom, a private yard, and soaring windows.

via 18 | Can't Make Rent? This Beautiful Squatter's Home Can Be Built On A Vacant Lot In A Day | Co.Exist | ideas + impact.